Mr. and Mrs. Holmes will receive the congratulations and good wishes of friends all over the South, and especially of those in Birmingham, who feel a profound interest in their welfare and their future success. During Mrs. Holmes' brief sojourn in our city she has surrounded herself with many friends, who have been charmed by her personality and her intellectual force." The papers also describe the com. mencement exercises of the Institute in glowing terms. They were decidedly original and instead of the usual essays, a drama, written by Miss Summers, entitled "The True Woman" was given. Taking the character studies which the young ladies had made from the world's most famous women, Miss Summers wove beauty and sweetness, and from them culled the True Woman. The drama was closed with the beautiful pantomine, sung very sweetly by Mr. F. L. Willis. Beautiful posing and draping then concluded part first."

W. P. WALTON.

THE republican hosts from Cape Cod to Kalamazoo and from hell to breakfast have captured St. Louis lock, stock and barrel and now hold it unconditionally. All the preliminaries of the big convention are arranged and after the chairman of the National committee has got in his work to-day, C. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, will be elected temporary chairman. He will have the appointment of the committees and after they report and the convention is permanently organized Gov. William McKinley will be nominated on the first ballot, if indeed such a formality is not dispensed with and the nomination made by acclamation. Since he has made his calling sure, the nomination of a candidate for vice president is now creating the most interest. A baker's dozen are "mentioned," but if the party is as smart as it usually is, it will nominate Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, the greatest man in the republican ranks since James G. Blaine was called from labor. To be sure the thing will be heavier at the tail than at the head, but it will make the ticket an unusually strong one and we fear a winning one if the gold standard is declared for and the democrats do as Grant said, "Always wrong at the right time." But we haven't given up hope yet. The assembled wisdom of the democratic party at Chicago may devise a platform and find a Moses to lead us out of the wilderness and to that end let us all unite in pray-at Nicholasville, J. Speed Smith came up smiling and making a virtue of a necessity withdrew from the race he was already out of, and moved to make Davison's nomination unanimous. This servility is likely more for show than for years and sanctioned by the example of observance. He and his followers are as mad as hades and unless they cool off before election, which they will likely do as republicans vote like sheep follow the bell wether-without question and without complaint, they may do some stabbing in the recesses of the voting booths. Gov. BRADLEY withdrew from the race for the presidental nomination, which he was not in, Sunday, and requested Hon. John W. Yerkes to leave that nominating speech unspoken. He says he would not accept a nomination for vice-president and wants no other office than the one he has.

TO A BUTTERFLY.

(Written for The Times.)

Sail on, thou white-winged butterfly And sip the flowers of spring! Thou once a caterpillar was-A creeping, writhing thing.

As thou crept once, so now I creep. Amid my earthly care, But some sweet day I'll be as gay, Some day I'll be as fair. WILL SHANKS.

Stanford, Ky. Apropos of the above, a friend contributes the following:

When Billy is a butterfly, And waits on velvet wing, He'll fly away from 'earthly care"

"And sip the flowers of Spring." When Billy is a butterfly, With wings a golden bue, He will dwell 'mid fairest flowers,

As Nymphalica do. When Billy is a butterfly He'll be as fair and gay

As the fairest Lyczenida In rosy bower's sway When Billy is a butterfly, Outgrown the chrysalis state, Diurnal Lepidoptera Will be his new cognate.

When Billy is a butterdy, A caterpillar's son. When the pige begin to fly

As they have never done When Billy is a butterfly, When the cow jumps o'er the moon, He'll then be sweet and gay and fair, And that is just as soon.

> BEAT THE TOLL-GATES. - The law proyides that persons going to and from mill with their sacks on horseback shall pass toll-gates free. A West End man solved for a while the question of free pikes so far as he is concerned by always being astride a sack when he passed the gates. The keepers thought he was using a vast amount of meal at his house, but raised the pole and said nothing. They resolved, however, to investigate the first chance that presented itself, when it was discovered that the sack contained nothing but bran, which had been used to deceive so long, it had almost become hard tack. The fellow doesn't travel now as much as he used to.

ED HIM. - Anthony Alcorn, who was given a death sentence last week for calling his fatherfout and shooting him to death is holding up remarkably well and greets the numerous visitors he has with a smile. He talks freely about the killing and insists that he was justified in shooting the old man. His father and mother were never married and in fact never lived together. When Anthony was six years old his mother sent him to his father to keep, but the father didn't want him and the boy was sent to a relative's house, where he remained till he was eight.
